A. P. Tupper, Esq., has bought another building lot, on the hill north of the college, of Mr. Twitchell, and has begun the erection of a second tenement house. Mr. Tupper has already had a number of applications for the house just completed. There is, at present, a great demand for the right sort of tenements.

Mr. W. A. Tyrrell, manager of F. W. Smith and company's marble mill at Belden's Falls, has rented the larger part of Mrs. Goodrich's house on Academy street, and moved in this week. His son, W. A. Tyrrell, Jr., has lately taken Col. T. M. Chapman's new tenement house on South street.

Middlebury is seldom visited by a troupe of so little merit as the Uncle Tom's Cabin combination that showed here on Friday evening. Eva and the colored singers were the only redeeming features. The two Marks were execrable clowns, whose stock-in-trade consisted of stale gags. The audience was large.

Mr. Frank H. Knowlton, who was graduated from the college in the class of 1884, has lately spent several days here. He is in charge of the department of recent botany in the museum of the Smithsonian institution, Washington, and is engaged most of the time in analyzing and arranging plants sent to the museum from all parts of the world. He has been connected with the institution for nearly two years.

The meeting at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last Sunday was well attended, although the day was cold and stormy. The address, given by Rev. S. L. B. Speare, was good and practical for all. The young men's meeting was held as usual on Wednesday evening, led by the secretary. At the service next Sunday Prof. Austin will give an address. The secretary will conduct the services in the Congregational church at Bridport.

As the days grow shorter and the evenings cooler the desirability of a public reading-room becomes more apparent than ever, as is shown by the attendance at the reading-room of the Y. M. C. A. During the summer months only the ordinary work of the association has been carried on, but the meetings have been supported by unexpectedly large numbers. Now new work is to be entered upon. Arrangements have been already made with Mr. Will. Bond to open a class in penmanship in the building, beginning next month. All members of the association will be admitted to the class free of charge. It is possible that there will also be a class in book-keeping. It is expected to have talks by different persons at various times in the hall. Mr. J. E. Crane has consented to tell something about the nature and habits of bees, a subject about which most persons know very little, but which is exceedingly interesting. Mr. C. C. Peck will give an account of miners and mining. These will be followed by still others. Social entertainments will also be held occasionally. Systematic effort will be made to increase the membership and everything is to be done that is possible to make the Y. M. C. A. a power in the community for the good of the young men.

MISSING.

Mr. E. R. Rich, father of Mr. E. E. Rich of this village, is missing. He formerly lived in Richville, but had been with his son here for three weeks. He was last seen about five o'clock on the morning of Wednesday, the 8th inst. He was out of his head, but harmless, and was in the habit of wandering about. His son supposed he had gone to Shoreham, and consequently did not attempt to find him till Friday, when he telegraphed to Shoreham. On learning he was not there he began to search, but without success thus far. Mr. Rich is about 60 years of age. He is short, and wears his hair and beard long; and when he disappeared had on a black hat, long linen coat, dark trousers and slippers.

"NANCY &amp; CO."

Which is to be given at the town hall tomorrow evening by Arthur Rehan's company, from Daly's theatre, New York, who stop here on their way home from a most successful tour in Canada, will draw a crowded house; and those who wish to attend should secure tickets at once at Hanaford's. The New York Tribune, speaking of it as played by this company, calls it "the best of all comedies and the crowning success of Augustin Daly's adaptations. Bubbling over with wit; scintillating with wit; replete in comical situations, 'Nancy &amp; Co.' is the funniest of all the comedies which have made Daly's N. Y. theatre synonymous with success and have given it international fame." The New York Herald says: "From the rise of the curtain till its final fall, there is a bustling, rapid succession of humorous incidents. The plot is just enough complicated to hold the attention of the audience without calling for any mental effort to follow it. It would be impossible in brief space to mention the myriad incidents of the piece. The audience was large, and the laughter elicited was literally incessant." The Toronto (Ont.) Mail of the 7th inst. says: "The play abounds in the most comical situations, which sustain the interest throughout and keep the audience in continual merriment. The company is a most carefully selected one, each member contributing largely to the general success and all being deserving of special mention." This is the Mail's version of the plot:

Mrs. Nancy Brasher writes a play. Mrs. Brasher desires to have that play fitted for production by a man of technical experience. She sends the plot to Mr. Kiefe O'Kiefe, professional dramatist. The play is presented, accepted, about to be played. Mrs. Brasher comes to town to see it played. All this she does without the sanction or knowledge of Brasher, who follows her to New York, where she takes rooms at the Windsor. Kiefe is in love with Griffing's niece and lives in Griffing's house. Nancy calls there to see him and excites the suspicions of Griffing. He and Diana, his niece, follow Nancy to the Windsor hotel, where they find her, as does her pursuing husband; and he not only finds her there, but finds her registered as Mrs. O'Kiefe. This delights Griffing, who dislikes O'Kiefe, and does not wish him to marry his niece Diana. Nancy explains nothing, but asks a suspension judgment until midnight—i. e. till after the play is played. Now, Griffing has a daughter with whom Captain Renssler, of the United States army, is in love. O'Kiefe helps Renssler to outwit Griffing and Renssler helps O'Kiefe in the same praiseworthy object. Finally the nature of the intimacy between Mrs. Brasher and her collaborator is made evident, all the doll mistakes explained.
